

Visa Appeal

Has your Australian visa been refused? You may be eligible to lodge an appeal.

A visa refusal can be devastating and stressful for both individuals and businesses. However, in many circumstances it may be possible to appeal the decision made by the Department of Home Affairs to the Administrative Appeals Tribunal (AAT).

Our team of dedicated lawyers and registered migration agents have over 20 years combined experience in Australian migration law and are well adept at assisting clients with cancellations and visa refusals. Thanks to our dedicated team, no option will be left unexplored and we provide advice to your unique case and visa circumstances regardless of how complex your situation may be. We also advise clients with health or character concerns as well as business requiring assistance with business monitoring or compliance issues.

Mygration has successfully managed many AAT appeals. If your visa has been cancelled or refused, our team can assist you with lodgement of the appeal (if available), drafting of submissions and attendance at the tribunal (if required). Contact one of our registered migration agents today for a consultation and to determine your eligibility to appeal.
